I worked close to four decades at the Roswell Park Memorial Cancer Institute in Buffalo, NY, then retired and moved over across the street to Buffalo General Hospital, the main teaching hospital at the State University of NY at Buffalo. I continue as professor of Pediatrics at the Medical School and Professor of Pharmacology at the Graduate School.

I continue to be in charge of a research laboratory although I am now slowing down. I am 86 years old and spend some time writing up papers on long complete studies. My husband, (Julian L. Ambrus M.D., Ph.D., FACP Professor of Medicine), my son (Julian L. Ambrus, Jr. M.D. Associate Professor of Medicine) and my daughter (Madeline A. Lillie M.D., Ph.D. Allergy immunology) also works at the same hospital, at times we have lunch together.
