

Lee Roy Morgan Jr., MD, PhD
Active Member
AACR Member Since 1965

During any 50 year period much can and does happen.

When I became a member in AACR – 1965, I was a PhD organic chemist and Assistant Professor of Pharmacology, LSU Medical School, New Orleans. During the next 50 years I would obtain a MD degree, become Professor/Chairman of Pharmacology (LSU Medical School), develop a career in experimental/clinical oncology and organize an R & D company (DEKK-TEC, Inc.) that specializes in neurooncology.

And AACR was always there. AACR continues to be an educational organization with media coverage that extracts and reviews the latest information in the attack on cancer!

For the investigator members – AACR is an outlet to publish and communicate progress in cancer research from laboratories world-wide.

AACR - thank you for being there and supporting the members.
